Encourage your students to shine as undergraduate researchers!

Building on the University’s commitment to engaged enquiry, the Institute for Teaching and Learning (ITL) is proud to offer funding support to two current University of Sydney undergraduate (UG) students to present their research at this year’s Australian Conference of Undergraduate Research (ACUR). It will be held 18-19 September in Canberra.

The conference is open to all current UG students, current masters by research students, and 2013 UG honours students. However, eligibility for the Sydney Support Scheme is restricted to current UG students (and their teachers), and excludes those currently completing honours programs. The idea being to highlight and support new and innovative curriculum and co-curriculum initiatives that are engaging UG students in research, outside of our established honours programs.

The new Sydney UG Research Conference Support Scheme offers funding to cover registration, travel and accommodation costs for two students and two staff members (those responsible for the initiatives that have engaged the students in research).

Further information about the Scheme, eligibility, and the application form is available here. Applications are due Wednesday 6 August. NB. Applicants must have already had their proposal accepted by the ACUR organising committee (proposals for ACUR are due Tuesday 1 July).

Queries regarding the Scheme are welcome. Please contact Dr Tai Peseta.
